Here's The Example

I am not suggesting this will happen with every shoe or every strategy. However, CheatSheets are accurate 60-70% of the time with at least 5 strategies I have tested including D'Almembert. This example is based on a live shoe of 44 hands played online with 8 decks. The number represent units the next table will convert them to $.

The CheatSheet is the result of over 15 years of playing and documenting my personal live Casino games with the goal of seeing if in fact there were repetitive patterns I could refer to with confidence while playing Baccarat. Plus I have tested an additional 2500 computer generated shoes. So do they work? Yes with good money management skill and knowing your risk/rewards tolerance. If emotions and gut feels guide you gambling decisions, there nothing that can really improve your game.

Here's The Example

Of course this is just one strategy and I sure you would want to try yours out on a CheatSheet

Lets look at the numbers
The top row is size of bets $10 to $100
2nd row is the amount of money you will have put at risk to achieve your winnings
3rd row is your winnings
4th row is Tie winnings
5th row is the grand total of winnings in rows 3&4

UNIT BET
$10	$25	$50	$100
$890	$2,225	$4,450	$8,900	Bank
$140	$350	$700	$1,400	Win'l
$ 120	$ 300	$ 600	$ 1,200	Tie W

An explanation on Ties. On my CheatSheet I have tracked and identified 13 hand with high frequency of ties in hand 1-48. Tie are proposition bet and should be you only bet nor should you bet the bank on them. Live online Baccarat shoes normally have a $25 maximum bet. In the above example you would put at risk $120 to winning $260 making a $10 bet. Not a bad return but can't be expected in every shoe. Some times you will lose.
